It is required of men to do something and to observe the commandments of God. This life is but a part of man's exist-This life is but a part of man's exist-cies, and those who try to do right and live up to what they know will re-crive a blessing, though they have not obeyed the fulness of the gospel. It is the same today as it was when Christ minstered to his apostles. It has been and that Christ will come again and right on the earth 1,000 years. We be-lieve that that reign of righteousness that that reign of rigteousness take place, and the Latter-day sill take place, and the Latter-day saints are preparing for that day. In ancient days the Jews had been taught that Christ would come, but when he did come they had only a form of godliness and did not receive him. He not only taught them the truths of the law of Moses but the higher truths of the gospel. They rected him and crucified him but that lid not destroy the light he brought. ELDER J. M. SJODAHL.

Elder J. M. Sjodahl read from the seventh to the thirteenth verses of the second chapter of Judges, regarding the people of Israel serving God in the lapse of Joshua and the lapse of the next generation who turned from prohipping God to the service of idols. The Scriptures read was said to be rature in possession of the human see. Its antiquity commends it to he are written by inspiration, for the crewitten by inspiration, for the service of the same purpose. It is the Scriptures which has not given the service of the same purpose. It is the Scriptures which has not given the service of the same purpose. It is the Scriptures which has not given the service of the same for the service of the human family, at one furnished to the human family, at one furnished. to the human family, at one tended for our instruction, we are, for one thing, reminded very forcibly of numan weakness. We are told that it only took one generation to obliterate the effects of the travels in the wilderness. While the old people remained Israel served God, but in one generation they turned and went after Baal and Astoroth. Thus we are taught that the tendency of man is to retrograde. Some evolutionists who have no use for God would have us believe that man by, his own immute power progressed to his precent summit from the stage of a monkey, or something still lower. But the tendency of man is to red downward instead of upward. It he so of ourselves individually. No matter now skillful a man may be in handlerned in the result of practise, if he stops he will ge back, if a man is proficent in languages or music he must practise to maintain his ground. The same tendency to retrogression is illustrated by the children of Israel who so soon forgut to serve God and turned to the gods of the Phoenicians and Assyrians. The results were soon apparent. The children of Israel were taken into bondage. The Anorites and other races were allowed to harrass Israel by destroying their crops and their flocks, their flords and submitting the people to slavery. That is one of the lessons of this part of the Scriptures. You cannot turn away from God without incurring his displeasure. Those who enter into covenants. He is not a being without passion, but when justice demands he can be angry.

without passion, but when justice demands he can be angry.

It is comparatively easy to serve other gods, but it requires effort to serve the true God. We must pray; we must meet with the saints in their assembles. Some say they can study at home and do not need to go to meet, ing. This is often urged as an excuse for negligence. Those who love God want to he with the people of God in their worship. They have a longing for it as a healthy person craves food. The service of God also requires the sacrifice of our means. Some think to much money is required. To them the speaker wished to say that the religion of Christ is not cheap. It cannot be found on the bargain counter. It is like the pearl of great price to obtain which a man sold all he had. The religion of Baal and Astoreth was no doubt easier and far less exacting than the law of Moses. But by yielding to their enemies in their religion the people eventually become slaves. That was the price they paid for worshiping false gods.

Bishop Carl A. Ek of the Twentyfith ward stated that that ward was growing to such an extent that durng the past summer an extension had been built to the meetinghouse. The ward now has six fine class rooms for Sunday school work. Bishop Ek also spoke of the pleasant relations which existed between the bishopric and nonnembers of the Church who resided in hut vicinity. Several baptisms had been verformed lately and the outlook in this regard was encouraging. Bishop Chas. H. Worthen of the Fourth ward said that the bishopric was engaged in a house to house canvass, which was resulting in much good. All the auxiliary organizations in the ward were complete and plenty of workers were ready. Bishop Worthen endorsed the remarks of President Mc-Lachlan regarding the need for acting teachers. He stated that the ward had twelve missionaries in the field and the hishopric was endeavoring to keep this number out as it was found that a very beneficial reflex effect was fell among the families of the missionaries.

among the families of the missionaries Bishop Carl A. Carlson of the Pop-lar Grove ward said a complete organization had been effected and the results showed that Church organiza-tion is a great help to the saints in serving the Lord.

Bishop Hiram T. Spencer of the Pleasant Green ward said there were three Sunday schools and three were three Sunday schools and three pri-maries in operation in the ward, Very shortly the new meetinghouse for the Garfield branch will be opened. There was a very large moving population in the ward and it was expected that much good could be done among those moving members of the Church, many of whom were willing to make sacrifices for the Church, but could not live up to its teachings and requirements.

Norn H. Barton, counselor in the stake Primary presidency, reported that the 1909-16 season started with 116 active local workers in the stake. Of this number 90 observed the word of wisdom. The work of the Primary organization was now graded into five grades and the officers and teachers were prepared to do the best work they had ever done. The officers earnestly invited the mothers of the stake to support the Primaries by sending their children to attend them. Elder C. Clarence Neslen, stake superintendent of the Sunday schools, said there were more than 3,000 chilsaid there were more than 3,000 chil-dren enrolled in the schools of the stake. Elder Neslen paid a high tribute to the efficient work of Elder Edward E. Jenkins, who had recently removed from the position of counselor to the stake, and had therefore been released from the position of counselor to the superintendent of the stake.

Patriarch John Smith briefly addressed the meeting. He told of the lessons he learned early in his missionary experience, teaching him that young men should spend their boyhood and young manhood preparing for future usefulness in all ways.
